Budgets for PIT, SUB, speakers 'd

By MARK WARSCO

Budgets for Purdue Indiana Theater (PIT), Purdue Indiana Student Speakers (PISS), university music, and the Student Union Board (SUB) were approved at the Student Senate meeting Tuesday night. A $25,000 budget was also submitted later by Shoshuni Bull for the Black Assembly.

SUB received a $18,000 allocation for next year, while $10,000 was allocated to PIT, $200 to PISS and $1,275 to university music. The $16,000 for SUB includes $11,000 for four concerts, $1,200 for a ski trip, $200 for the Penny Carnival, and $7,400 for Harbarbar Days events.

PIT and PISS were the only budgets with any opposition. In both cases the outgrowth was over the amount cut from the proposed budgets by the Bureau of the Budget. Dr. Frank Kemworny made the point that PIT's budget was not to its minimum before being submitted to the bureau and that the Bureau had cut an additional $1,000. He said, "Faced with this kind of cut, PIT might have to alter the kinds of services offered or charge students for tickets."

The senate chambers were filled by several PISS members at Dr. Richard Hess, faculty adviser to PISS, made a plea for funds. Hess pointed out that the proposed PISS budget of $1,200 had been cut by the bureau of the Budget to $600, with this type of cut PISS will only be able to go to half as many meets as planned. Senator Rick Lauer justified the bureau's cut by saying that PISS only had 20 members and that the bureau couldn't see spending $1,200 in student funds to benefit just 20 students.

PISS's open to all students and to a representative organ of the student body" was Hess's response to that comment. Lauer said both PISS and PIT failed to get more money because the Student Senate has less funds to allocate this year. PIT's budget passed 60-1, with Randy Kinnahl the negative vote. PISS's budget squeaked by 65-54, votes coming from: Carol Anderson, Hans Christensen, Randy Kinnahl, Kathy O'Connell, and Mark Spady.

The senate urged PIT and PISS to try to get university funds and to apply for more funds this fall if the part-time student activity fee goes through.

The university music budget passed with no problems. A question was asked as to whether the music department could live with the budget. "We have to," replied Dr. Andrew Harper, chairman of the department. The university music budget passed unanimously.

Also passing unanimously but with controversy was the SUB budget. Controversy focused on the number of concerts and the estimated income by the board. SUB representative John Feich said, "From past experience we know that it costs $2,500-$4,000 to put on a good quality concert." He continued, "We can't put on four good concerts for $11,000, therefore we ask that the number be changed to three." Kinnahl brought up the point that the bulletin can only take only two people and that these, too, are students since 200 tickets are allowed for sale only to the public in order to help fund concerts. Therefore, if only three concerts were provided, only 1,500 students would be served by the $11,000. Kinnahl went on to point out that the Mahogany Rush concert sold out in 10 minutes and that less expensive bands could be brought in while providing more concerts. Fletcher agreed but questioned the board meeting to $4,000 estimated income unless quality groups were afforded.

A movement was made to delete the line reading for concerts, allowing the board to give as many concerts as they could. "It's the Student Senate's duty to specify a minimum in amount of revenue," said Vice President Raulo Clements, who urged against the amendment. When the amendment was brought to a vote the vote ended in a tie, so Clements was to cast the tie-negative deciding vote.

It was finally decided to leave the figure at four stars.

The senate was surprised to learn that they were not through with budget proposals at the May 1 meeting.

A tenth budget proposal had been submitted to him. Chonah Bull, a member of the Black Assembly, asked for $25,000. Although the deadline for submitting budgets had passed, Clements said he would turn the budget proposal over to the Appropriations Committee for consideration.

The senate will deal with the Black Assembly's request at its May 15 meeting.

The senate also elected an executive committee to act during the summer months. The Committee will consist of Rick Lauer, Eugene Paulsen, Carol Anderson, Tim Ducey, with Vice President Clements and Secretary Feich as alternates or non-voting members. All actions of this committee will be subject to approval by the senate at the whole when it re-convenes in the fall.

Largest class to graduate in ceremonies May 12

Commencement ceremonies for IPFW graduates will last 7:30 p.m. Monday, May 12, at the Memorial Coliseum.

For the eighth consecutive year a new record for total graduates has been established, with 1,180 students participating in the event.

Chancellor Donald Schwartz indicated that the 1,180 graduates include 1,000 diplomas or certificates and 180 Purdue students will receive academic honors.

Schwartz will preside at the ceremony, and John W. Ryan, Indiana president, and Dr. Arthur O. Hansen, Purdue president, will deliver the charge to the graduates. This marks the first time a representative for Chancellors Schwartz and Hansen will be present to deliver the charge to the graduates.

The musical program will be provided by the Indiana State Band, conducted by Wayne Bennett. Joseph K. Meyers, associate professor of music, will direct the national anthem following the academic procession, and the Rev. W. Timothy Peterson, campus minister, will deliver the invocation.

Chancellor Schwartz will confer honors and present degree candidates and Presidents Ryan and Hansen will confer the diplomas.

The induction of the class of 1973 into the Indiana Alumni Association will be headed by Carolyn E. Schaefer, member of the Indiana University Board of Trustees; Ruth Smith, director of the Indiana Alumni Association; and Paul Kibbutz, chairman of the Class Council of 1973.

Following the class of 1973 induction, the Purdue University Alumni Association will be addressed by Mary Ruth Snyder, assistant director of the association; and Amy A. Archibald, representative of the graduate class of 1973.

The senior class will present a gift of appreciation to the school for a new building on the library.

Information concerning dignitary pickup will be mailed to graduates eight to ten weeks after announcement by the Registrar.

Registration for the ceremony will be held at the Coliseum from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday, May 14.

A 'concerned' generation?

Last Saturday's rock festival raises some serious questions about the attitudes of an upcoming generation of artists and residents.

There is danger in generalization, but it's fair to say that the 10 to 15 thousand young people who attended the concert are a good cross-section of youth in a city of 180,000. The mass exodus of concertgoers at 6 p.m., leaving behind their throw-away coolers and infinite beverage cans and bottles, speaks poorly of the young people in this area, young people who took off the hypocrisy of their elders.

Latering at the concert was rampant. The day excitement and broken glass underfoot showed a tremendous lack of concern for other people and even less for the environment.

It is ironic that some young members of a generation that banded together to protest the waste of lives in Vietnam, thoughtless environmental pollution, and a government they felt repressive, could not muster enough civility to place their garbage in provided receptacles. The irony of the situation is further compounded by the fact that most who attended were guests of the student body. They were being treated to an afternoon of entertainment with IFPW hearing most of the financial burden of the activity. It is nothing less than an insult to the university and its students that the Student Union and surrounding grounds were turned into shambles.

If the disaster we saw Saturday is representative of the attitudes of young people nationally, and we sincerely hope it is not - hypocrisy and thoughtless behavior threaten to dominate our national life.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wildlife valued more highly by some than human fetuses

To the editor:

Ignoring the danger to life and limb and ignoring the even worse fate of being branded a "male chauvinist pig" I have decided to tackle the main arguments of the pro-abortionists. There might well be other arguments put forward but these are the ones heard most often.

Perhaps the strongest of these arguments is the right of the woman as to the control of her body. Indeed we all have the right to control our own bodily functions. We can decide when to have our nose and when to exercise our waist. We can decide when to wake when to sleep. The woman, as we all know from our sixth grade sex education classes, has a special bodily function. The function is the production of offspring. Now I know many of you still and object. "What is the problem?" Isn't the responsibility of employers who fail to hire or promote people of merit. For such employers, in fact, the "merit principle" has never been the method of selection.

The goal of affirmative action is to remedy such inequality of opportunity and to recognize and reward merit.

We as human beings regard our responsibility to the protection of life. Unfortunately today, at a hell of a lot. We make a great effort to protect our wildlife but when it comes to our own potential offspring we throw them in the garbage.

George Foster

Merit principle not used

To the editor:

In response to Dr. George C. Ruch III's article in the April 18 issue of the Communicator, the "assault upon the merit principle" is the responsibility of employers who fail to hire or promote people of merit.

For such employers, in fact, the "merit principle" has never been the method of selection.

The goal of affirmative action is to remedy such inequality of opportunity and to recognize and reward merit.

ment schools are merit prestige due to their academic success. Upon graduation from secondary school, all students again take a joint exam to become certified high school graduates. This exam result also determines which students will be admitted to government universities are from the government high schools.

The school with which Mrs. Westrich's husband is affiliated and to which her children probably go is not a government school. I believe that her judgement of Chinese students in Hong Kong is based on a limited perspective.

It is important to read or listen to my report critically. Granted, it is easier to maintain our superior attitude about our own government, educational system, and other institutions, but it is neither realistic nor intelligent to do so.

Linda Chul

Do profs get off scot-free?

To the editor:

Since last week, a few more points concerning the troubling parking situation at IFPW have come to my attention. A question of extreme discrimination against the students does exist.

Several faculty members have received tickets and quite evidently refuse to pay them. And, putting myself in their place, I can easily see why. If I had a class to teach at, say 10:30, and there were no parking spaces available, you can bet your last dollar that I'd park on the nearest yellow line. My time is valuable to me, as is everyone else's.

Neither the staff, faculty, or students have 70 minutes to waste looking for a parking space.

Again, considering discrimination, students have their diplomas withheld, or records encumbered when they don't pay their fines. What happens to faculty and staff?

A case in point is the situation of Dr. Kathy Squadrito. This doctor of philosophy has not paid her ticket. She accepted the fine, but to her dismay, it was upheld. The five days passed and the fine was not paid. Quite in fact, the five days allowed to pay the fines have passed several times over, and will continue to do so.

This point cannot be overlooked or denied. I am extremely interested in hear what IFPW has to say about this. Unless of course they should be the surprise of all of us concerned--can the diplomatic ball be so something about it.

It is amazing how much money, red tape, and wasted energy could be saved by this comparatively simple act.

Ileen A. Saunders

Editor's Note: Campus policy requires students, faculty, and staff to pay any monies owed by them to the university or face the consequences. In the case of students, the "consequences" might entail the withholding of diplomas, refusal of transcripts, or refusal of admission or registration privileges.

University employees who are in arrears on parking fees, fines, or any other daily assessed charges are contacted by the business office and told to pay any monies owed IFPW. Usually a letter from the business manager is all that is required to remind delinquent employees of their outstanding debts.

The writer is correct in stating that Dr. Squadrito has refused to pay the parking fine in question. Her case, as well as those of two other university employees, have been turned over to the chancellor's office. Chancellor Donald Schwartz told the Communicator Wednesday that faculty and staff will be treated the same as students. If an employee refuses to pay parking fines, he/she can be denied parking privileges on campus.

Rock fest aftermath disheartening

By DAVE NICHOLS

Between 10 and 15 thousand young people crowded onto the campus of IPFW Saturday for the Student Union Band rock festival. After six hours of music from three bands the crowd left, leaving its refuse behind.

The array of broken glass, throw-away cans, litter, and dog excrement was scattered from the knoll where the bands performed to the grassy area west of Neil Hall.

A Friday night rain had left the grounds drained and matted soil and mud marked the festival location. Strawberry was trampled with redwood chips and political pamphlets scattered over the sidewalks in the courtyard.

Restroom facilities on the ground floor of the Student Union, open to festgoers, drew long lines. Mud, broken bottles, beer cans, and urine were deposited on the doors at the day's end.

One youth was taken to Parvlew Hospital for stitches in his foot after stepping on a broken beer bottle, according to nurse Stanley Fider.

One person pulled a fire alarm in the Student Union which beeped for about 15 minutes before being quieted. It is not known who pulled the alarm or for what reason.

One matron preparing to clean up the restroom said she had "never seen such a mess," and characterized the festgoers as "inconsiderate."

Dick Shaaf, director of buildings and grounds, said shrubs planted at the southeast corner of the Student Union are "ruined" and added "it's too early to tell if the soil in front of the patio needs to be replaced." Shaaf noted after last year's festival 15 shrubs were ruined and replacements were bought at a cost of approximately 25 percent.

After seeing the results of Saturday's concert he doesn't know if the replacement shrubs will be planted in front of the patio.

Beer pull tabs and broken glass in the shrub beds and scattered in the lawn are dangerous, says Shaaf, pointing to the number of people who are starting to go barefoot and the possibility of a lawn mower spitting the charred debris and injured passerby.

"This kind of thing just tears us up," Shaaf said. "We make an effort to keep the grounds clean and this is disgraceful."

Business Manager Jim Thibault, who attended the festival, said there was no breakage or severe damage. "I guess when you have a rock concert you get all kinds," he speculated.

Further ahead the concert aftermath could have a "double effect" on students considering IPFW as a college choice. Some observers may have held the festival atmosphere and school here as a result, he said. But Thibault added others might say "if that's what they do out there I'll never set foot on that place again."

Thibault encourages students to voice their opinions about the festival and its aftermath when plans are made for next year's festivities.

Much of the refuse (bottles, cans, pull tabs) were from beer containers. Thibault felt since the concert was publicized as being a "no alcohol, no drugs" affair, student government people should not have welcomed the crowd with beer cans in hand. If they had, they would not have been in such a hurry to get rid of them.

The big question about the concert aftermath is to do they (young people) care," Thibault said.

Dean Deane Lantz said she had "mixed emotions" about the refuse left on the grounds. "I don't know what's more important, providing entertainment or keeping the campus beautiful."

"You don't have that many people that go anywhere without some mess," she added. "The great percent of the people were well behaved."

One person helping pick up the debris after the concert said: "I just don't know what happened. It started out okay."

Barbarbar Days, IPFW's celebration of spring, began with an Environmental Awareness Day and concluded with a free outdoor rock concert. A concert by Barry Labov and friends, a film orgy and egg toss contests, and a free pig roast were also events in the spring ritual.

Barry and friends 'extraordinary'

By MICHAEL SNYDER

Barry Labov & Friends proved two things to the capacity crowd that heard them perform at IPFW last week—one, that the Conventions Committee can indeed successfully present musical programs on campus; and two, that the Fort Wayne area is blessed with more talent than most people realize.

Many of the 25-plus who filled the Neil Recital Hall Thursday evening found it hard to believe that all the music they were hearing was the work of one extraordinary gentleman who had been in their midst for two years. That's how Labov, a 19-year veteran of Gas, Food & Lodging, has been attending the festival as a music major. Labov's compositions ran the gamut from folk, pastoral melodies to one work that juxtaposed 15-tone rows with music concrete. Other works reflected the influence of odd Ruckert, the Moody Blues, and ELP on his writing.

The three musicians who backed up Labov's vocals and keyboards were all from the area, also. Cliff Webb and Mike Williams are from Fort Wayne, and Gene Murray lives in Decatur. Murray and Williams had both worked with Labov before as members of Gas, Food & Lodging, but Webb was on stage with him for the first time.

Webb's guitar work and harmonies were tasteful throughout, but "Atomic Boogie" was the only real showcase for his talents. During most of the other numbers, he and his Gibson were laid-back—but rowdy in fact, the entire band was incredibly tight, considering the four had first joined together in March, especially for this show. During the two-hour performance, there were only two or three instances where someone hesitated a split-second, and there were slight enough to pass unnoticed by anyone with another musician's precise timing. Murray's precise timing on percussion added an important part in keeping the music together, most working bands couldn't approach Barry & Friends in that respect.

Of course, there's a possibility that the Friends will become more permanent as a result of last week's successful concert and the almighty Labov has received locally. Several promoters and recording executives were in the crowd that gave the band one of the most enthusiastic ovations ever received in Recital Hall.

Outgoing Conventions Committee Chairman Charles Pratt and Mary Ellen Brown, who will succeed him in that office, were both on hand for the concert and expressed their pleasure at the lineup. Student services dean Jack Ulmer sent a one-word message backstage to Labov: "Fantastic."

Labov, who now writes all his own music and lyrics, played all the keyboards used in the live concert, including Hammond organ, piano, ARP synthesizer, and a mellotron-like instrument used on percussion.

He is presently making plans for future concerts and a college circuit tour.

Are you getting something off the price because they've taken something off the car?

Now that rebates are over, some car manufacturers have found another way to offer you less of a price.

They give you less of a car.

They've taken away some things that used to be standard equipment and made those options.

At Fiat, we give you a low price without any gimmicks. The things that make the car perform better, as well as the things that make you feel better, are yours at no extra cost. As a matter of fact, this year we've added even more standard equipment.

And the Fiat 128 isn't just economical when you buy it, it's economical when you drive it. Which is the best kind of standard equipment you can get.

ARTS COMMUNIQUE

Dental research
The Preventive Dentistry Research Institute has published an article in the upcoming May issue of the "Journal of Dental Research" entitled, "The Physical Characteristics of a New, Cleaning, and Polishing Agent for Use in a Prophygia's Paste," by Mark S. Pitt, Carl J. Kleider, Dr. Joseph A. Davis, Dr. Ralph C. Schumacher, and Dr. Joseph C. Mahler. This article describes advances in oral health care resulting from research at IPFW during the past three years.

Donahue recital
Carolyn Donahue, an IPFW applied voice major, will present her graduate voice recital Sunday, May 3 at 8 p.m. in Recital Hall. Miss Donahue, a coloratura soprano, recently performed roles in the Rogers and Hammerstein Pops Concert with the Philharmonia at the "Save the Embassy Night" and gave vocal recitals as an actress in her starring role in "The Impresario" last week at the Performing Arts Center. Her program will include works by Beethoven, Joseph Mass, Richard Head, Giuseppe Verdi and others. The recital is free and open to the public.

River display
One of the displays in Ketter Hall that caught the interest of a great many students during Environmental Week was the display featuring the importance of the three rivers in the Fort Wayne area.

Students are underway in Washington to include the St. Joseph, Maumee, and St. Mary's rivers as a part of the National Science Waterways.

If this recognition is achieved, federal funds are available to help restore the ecological balance of the water and banks of the rivers.

Bob Jurek, a local candidate for the city council, has used boats to emphasize his concern about these rivers. He has planned to improve the flow and quality of the water.

The plan to include the river in the city of the future by removing the salt and containing the banks for public use.

Prof. Sheldon
Mark Sheldon, instructor in philosophy, read a paper entitled "Metaphysics" at the spring meeting of the Indiana Philosophical Association, April 12. Sheldon also was awarded a grant from the Indiana Committee for the Humanities to conduct a series of public seminars in Medical ethics.

Film festival
The I.U. Department of English and Linguistics is sponsoring a May Day Film Fest this week which will continue through Friday.

Yesterday's film was "Hamlet," and today George Bernard

Shaw's version of "Caesar and Cleopatra" will be shown at 1:30 p.m. in the IMAX Theater. The film, directed by Claude Baines and Victor Lejins at their natural best.

At 1:30 p.m. in the IMAX Theater, the 1961 Saturday Ray film "Two Dudes" will be presented in Ketter 20th. This adaptation of two Tagore stories has been called "the most beautiful short story film ever seen." Friday evening at 7:30, Glenda Jackson and Alan Bates will star in the 1979 film "Women in Love," the adaptation of the novel by D. H. Lawrence. "Women in Love" will be shown in Ketter 20th.

Prof. DeBerry
Dr. Clyde DeBerry, director of General Studies, was invited to participate in a National Conference on the future of the liberal arts at the Y.M.C.A. in Detroit, April 27-28. Attendance at the conference was by invitation only and included representatives from the areas of education, employment, religion, politics and the economy. Among the attendees were Congressman Andrew Young, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, John J. Bond, and the mayor of Detroit.

Film Series
Ken Vaught and Burt Ryals will participate in this week's Film Series presentation, "Deliverance" running Friday at 2:30, 7:30 and 9:30 in Neil 101. The motion picture version of James Dickey's best-selling novel was filmed on location in the mountains of northern Georgia.

Nurses' pinning
The pinning ceremony for two-year degree students of nursing at IPFW will be held at 5 p.m. Sunday, May 11, in the Student Union Ballroom.

Approximately 100 students will graduate from the program with a Bachelor of Science in Nursing. In addition to the pinning ceremony, all graduates will participate in the IPFW commencement on May 12.

Sharon Kuehn, master of ceremonies, will welcome graduates, their families and friends. Terri Moore will give the student address and Chancellor Daniel Schwartz will deliver the charge to the graduates.

Guest speaker will be Dr. Sheldon Schumacher, president of the American Association of Dental Schools, who will be "Health Care Delivery Systems." The program will include a section on ethics of nursing, will present the simulation of the closing address will be given by student Douglas White.

A reception will follow in the Student Union Ballroom.

Model rockets
The Summit City Aerospace Modelers, an area model rocket club, will host the Midwest Model Rocket Convention.

The convention will include various topics in the field of model rocketry. Discussions will include model rocket engine performance, high performance duration, model rocket night flights, model rocket motors, transmitters, pulsed radio, model rocket launchers, advanced boost gliders, scale building techniques, types of model rockets, model rocket photography, supermodel and transonic model rockets, model rocket math, computers and model rocketry, and international competition. There will be participants and speakers from all over the world in attendance.

The convention will be held at the Student Union May 31 through June 1.

As interest grows Women's studies set for fall semester

Women's studies courses are again being offered in the fall semester at the 1979 academic year. Since the initiation by Professor Kathryn Adamsky of the first course, "Psychology of Women" four years ago, interest has grown greatly and a women's studies committee has now been formed under the direction of Adamsky and Marie Bonhomme.

The programs are designed to encourage a heightened awareness of the stereotyping of men and women, and the resulting subordinate role of women, as well as to formulate positive strategy for future change.

As one of the few areas in which a multi-discipline study is available, the typically fragmented approach to learning has been avoided. Literature, psychology and history have been included to insure relevance coupled with a broad perspective in a variety of subject material.

The structure of the program has been devised to eliminate traditional competitiveness in education and shall the emphasis move to mutual cooperation of class members. According to students of previous years, this was an ideal method for allowing them to pursue a wide range of interests within the loose framework of studies.

Both men and women have enrolled in the past and any inquiries can be directed to Adamsky in the psychology department or to Bonhomme.

Women's studies courses offered include "Identity and Expression, an Introduction to Women in Literature," taught by Ruth Langhans, which will explore recurring themes, stereotypes, and life styles of women in the novels, short stories and poetry of personal confrontation, and "Images of Women in Hispanic Literature," with Linda Fox, instructor. Other topics include the women in Hispanic literature poetry, drama, short story, and novel in English translation from the 17th century to the present.

Also offered will be "The American Women's Movement: Ideas and Issues," taught by Kathy Mettler and Alice Scott, which will include an investigation of the feminist movement from 1850 to 1970. Feminism as a social movement has been applied in America; and "The Psychology of the Female Experience," taught by Adamsky as instructor, will cover the current research in the psychological nature and their role in society.

'Hidden Heroes' starts Women's ear

International Women's Year in Fort Wayne will begin with a "Hidden Heroes" contest, sponsored by the Women's Heritage Committee of the Fort Wayne Bicentennial Commission. The contest will be conducted on a format of a writing contest to encourage the community to begin researching the forgotten contributions that women have made in the family, community, and nation throughout history.

Anyone is eligible to submit an original biographical sketch of a local woman, no longer living, who is considered by the entrant as having made a significant contribution either locally, nationally, or internationally. The only requirement is that the woman must have spent part of her life in Allen County.

All entries must be submitted on 8 1/2 by 11 inch, 10% the lives of the women's Heritage Committee Writing Contest.

entry. The cover page must include the author's address, phone number, and the title of the biographical sketch. The remaining pages may be headed only with the title of the sketch, and may not exceed 1,000 words. All reference sources must be included, along with any pertinent historical documents.

The biographical sketches will be judged on the basis of literary style, subject matter, and authenticity, and are the property of the Women's Heritage Committee and will not be returned.

The winning entrants will receive a cash prize, with the first prize winner awarded $20, second place awarded $10, and third place awarded $5. Also, a first, second, and third prize and honorable mention selections will be published by Fred Reynolds of the Fort Wayne Public Library in book form.

The deadline for entries is May 15 at 12:00, 1979. The winners will be announced in the next issue of the Women's Heritage Committee Writing Contest.

entry. The cover page must include the author's address, phone number, and the title of the biographical sketch. The remaining pages may be headed only with the title of the sketch, and may not exceed 1,000 words. All reference sources must be included, along with any pertinent historical documents.

Males dance provocatively at Cat's Meow

By DENISE BUCKS

Cat calls (pardon the pun), whistles and shouts of "get your gear off, love" ring through the ears as the doors of the Cat's Meow open. A typical strip joint you may say. This one certainly was unique in the experience of most, for it was a complete male-female role reversal.

Replacing the traditionally voluptuous nymph was a rather bizarre male counterpart, dancing provocatively instead. The audience was comprised solely of women.

By the time the difficult tasks of securing a table and overcoming the initial shock waves were accomplished, "Trigger," the next dancer in line, had commenced his act. A silver pair of brasses held up a seemingly modest pair of trunks and a matching earring and bracelet set off the outfit to perfection.

"But you haven't seen any thing yet!," one in the crowd, and indeed the skin tight outfit followed the silver braces to the floor of the stage, minus the weaver, to reveal a skimpier costume still.

And so it progressed, until Trigger's two songs were over, and the master of ceremonies took the spotlight. Guests were cordially invited to be generous with their tips and place them "where they liked" on the dancer's person, as long as they observed the rules, namely "no sex and no change," for obvious reasons. The limelight shy are also well catered for and are welcome to submit anonymous letters directed at the dancers which are read by the M.C.

Several budding poets experienced their first public readings, but it was difficult to imagine Burns, Whitworth, or Whew enduring their talent. If a comparison were to be made, Ogden Nash would have probably been the closest in style. Kenia, the first of the half-don dancers, was very willing to be interviewed, but stipulated that his words were to be quoted correctly, as the troupe had been offended by a previous article. "We are not male prostitutes, dancing on beds," he emphasized. There was among the artists a great desire to be taken seriously. Kenia's outfit was professionally made and he obviously treated his vocation with the utmost seriousness, despite his original attitude of

"doing it for a buck."

Perhaps one of the most dedicated performers was Robbi, who claimed that, contrary to the thoughts of many conservative people here, all the performers have other employment, and his personal reason for choosing such a part-time occupation was his enjoyment of dancing and exercise. "You need to put your heart into it," he said, and went on to indicate that the audience is indeed discriminating as far as the varied ability of the dancers.

Generally, the impression on gets is that the women in the audience, ranging in age from 21 to 75, according to one of the owners, think that the idea is novel, quite funny, although one wonders to an extent whether the humor was concealing emotion. There were only two women interviewed who cared to volunteer their names. Many were married or being bothered by men. Some thought the act was different, but that girls were better, while others, obviously less concerned with artistic value, were glad that "something was left to the imagination." Several came purely to enjoy the dancing and mentioned that they were in the same dancing class as one of the performers.

As Trigger completed his second appearance, there was observed several minutes owing to the disappearance of an item of his discarded apparel. One of the audience volunteered knowledge of the article in question, but suggested that possession was nine tenths of the law, until finally conceding to Trigger's pleas and handing back the shorts.

Joseph Kleinschicht, part owner of the venture, said that the original concept was taken from a Maryland nightclub. Despite his initial reservations—"I thought it was a 'bitch'—the crowded room and standing room only crowds on Wednesday and Thursday are proof positive to its success.

"The girls enjoy it. Some get turned on and I think it's here to stay." For those men who may be interested in applying for a position, the criteria are: "Well-built men who are clean and clean dance."

Miller wants to give high

By NORM FLETCHER

Chris Miller is not an average 33 year old New York Journalist. He is, however, a contributing line editor of the National Lampoon, one of the most widely read humor magazine.

"See-sucking in Athens" was the title of his program presented Tuesday by the Conventions Committee.

An English-business man spent his post-graduate years in the advertising field until 1971, when he joined the Lampoon staff.

"It was really difficult to get on the staff here," commented Miller. He said he had been turned away several times before being accepted.

Miller's first adventures in writing were for what he termed as a "trashy newspaper."

write something for this newspaper as a joke, so I did. "There was this large, gassy editor that I headed my first article to. He leaped through it, noting that I used enough profanity. He didn't even read it."

Miller said that he started to enjoy writing, and began to take it more seriously. Playback and the National Lampoon are the first magazines he submitted manuscripts to.

"Both of them turned me down at first. Playback said my work was great, but that they couldn't run it because it was too gross for their style," stated Miller.

National Lampoon finally did accept his work. Soon after that, Playback began to offer him general reporting assignments. Miller said that he enjoys writing short stories, and can do reviews of movies and albums, but straight news reporting hasn't become part of his style yet.

"I really don't try to make any comments with my articles," said Miller. "I just want to give my readers a hike, to take them on a trip."

At his performance Tuesday, Miller read three of his published articles and answered questions from the audience.

"Caricature Knowledge," a short story published in Our magazine, was one of the pieces presented. It is the story of a family that participates in social activities together, all enjoying the proceedings except one, a young boy. The boy has a fetish for foods and is ridiculed by his family because of his interest in the food instead of a family orgy.

Another story read by Miller was "Pipe Dream" which was published in the 1972 science fiction issue of National Lampoon. The story centers around the adventures of a New York drug dealer's acquaintance with a space person named Norman. Norman said "Colorado green pellet grass" that looks like it "couldn't stone on amphetamine."

The story progresses through the use of the drugs by the man and his discovery that the drug is actually Norman's excrement.

Miller's last story was one published in National Lampoon named "Conversation Piece." The story looks at an unique method for telephone companies to prompt delinquent accounts to pay.

The story revolved around Bernie Boombomb, the delinquent user, being seduced by his telephone. Just as Bernie is about to reach a climax with the telephone, he will not release them until he promises to pay his bill.

By CRAIG BOBAY and REX PUTT

The 1975 athletic season at IPFW is near completion. This year has been the most successful year in sports at the campus. The team which initiated the "Madisons" year of respectability, finishing the season at 8-5. The soccer team had its worst year ever, but the cross country team performed well despite many injuries and finished with a record just under the .500 mark (basketball) was the only winter sport, and the round ballers fought back from a 4-12 record to finish even at 12-12, a best ever for the basketball team.

Baseball and golf were the primary spring sports and both are a ways over .500 recordwise. The young, inexperienced tennis team performed extremely well in putting their finest record ever at 9-5. What was supposed to be a rebuilding year turned out to be a pleasant surprise for everyone involved, including Coach Chuck Boland. The netters won the city championship again this year, making it three in a row. The team, led by Gabe Bulmer and Glen Nevel, would have posted a 10-5 record if not for a called off punch that they were losing 1-1 after the first set.

Other players cited include senior leftfielder Tim White, the Comic Swanson, the first IPFW venterly letter winner at IPFW.

The soccer Madisons were victorious only once in thirteen outings, but the real worth of the season will be judged next fall when these experienced team members return for a hopefully winning campaign.

The team looked good against an equally experienced GSC Lima squad. The Tankers led at the half 6-0, at that point Coach Bob Leffers called the game on as refusing to humiliate an opponent. Goo Attebury, a very accomplished soccer player, had two goals in that contest. The team dropped its next game in a see-saw battle against rival St. Francis by a 4-1 count. IPFW looked good against a Tough Notre Ome team, as the Irish squeaked by them 2-0.

In a disappointing 22 tie with Indiana Tech, the Madisons couldn't capitalize often enough, even though they controlled the tempo of the game. Tech took advantage of a "hand" call and scored in a penalty kick.

Coach Frank Charba's cross country team finished its second season with a 5-9 win record. Goo Green led the pack all season long, he was the first IPFW man across the finish line in every one of the ten races.

The team started off with five runners and ended the season with approximately forty, which compares to the growing popularity in the past; as the two sports worked well together all season long.

One of the highlights of the season was the dedication of IPFW's own live and one-quarter mile race on September 28. The Madisons, on the late, turned back Anderson and Concordia, registering the first two home victories. A dinner was held after the meet, guest speaker Fred Wilks, ex-Olympic champion gave a short presentation on cross-country and track.

Coach Charba is looking forward to next year's season with high hopes. The first annual Indiana Purdue Quadrangle, a four-way meet with Ohio Northern, Manchester, and Anderson, will be held in the '76 season.

Gone Hoey, a teacher at Heritage High School, took over as mentor of the basketball team. In its previous year of turmoil, the varsity basketball team ended the season with an embarrassing 5-21 record. None of the blame went to the head coach and the heavy schedule, but the athletic department made changes in both.

At the outset of the 76-75 basketball schedule, the new Madison squad appeared to have talent, but they tried in the late going and lacked organization. The Tankers captured their first win in overtime against Wilberforce, but despite being in every game, their record dropped to 1-6. Mitch Easterly and Gary Betts proved to be key additions to the squad and led the Madisons in scoring.

The Madisons won three in a row at the end of the semester as sophomore Oren Putt, the second highest scorer for last year's team, excelled. The IPFW record stood at 6-6 after first semester action.

However, when it appeared that the chances for a .500 record were probable, Gary Betts grounded out the second. The Tankers promptly dropped the next four games, and the coaches were wishing Betts would return. What the coaches didn't know was that, that talent was there. Easterly played better than ever rebounding well and scoring at about a 20 point a game clip and Oren Putt took control from his guard spot, consistently scoring in the upper teens and lower twenties. Jack Stepler, Owe Poter and Rex Putt all aided Easterly underneath and Gary Trump topped up with Oren Putt at the guard position. With this combination the Madisons rebounded to victory in their final six contests and capped the dramatic rally by winning the regional campus championship for the first time.

Prickett returned at his post as the baseball team's manager for the sixth year. After a disappointing season last year, the Madisons responded to the coach's new image of respectability, winning their first two doubleheaders.

The Tankers have basically the same squad back from last year, but the few new players have been highly responsible for helping the team turn its record around. Coach Pinkerton, a 1970 graduate of Salter had filled in at third base and leads the team in hitting. Jim Murdoch, a 1974 graduate of Northrop has taken over the shortstop position and has also been impressive at the plate. Pitchers Mike Rosene and Mike Reley-Helm, Hackley, Hughes, Embury, and 1974.

The Madison golf team won two more matches this past week to run their record to ten wins and three losses.

On Wed and rainy Thursday, the match with St. Francis and Concordia Senior College at the Elks was rained out and it was decided that Concordia and IPFW would play at Brookwood until the water patted.

Undeclared trackmen Ralph Charlton and Gray McEachern will put their unbroken status on the line as the team goes into its first victory of the season against St. Francis, Goo Green, and Concordia tonight at three o'clock. The meet will be held on the Concordia Senior College track.

IPFW golf invitational today

According to Coach Leonard, a strong field is expected for the annual IPFW Invitational Golf Tournament. Sixteen schools from throughout the state are expected to compete.

In what has become the largest small college golf tournament in the region, the tournament starts at 11 a.m. and students, faculty, and staff are encouraged to come out to the Elks Country Club and witness some fine golf.

Coach Frank Charba feels that even though the team is not complete they are without a pole vaulter and a high hurdler they have been making a fine showing for themselves in the local college track scene. Coach Charba also added that he would like to see more spectators out to help cheer the Tankers on.

Track school records to date are as follows: High Jump-Gary McEachern (6'6"), Long Jump-Ralph Charlton (21'10"), Pole Vault—(no record), Shot Put—Mike Herman (32'10"), Discus—Mike Surface (165'10"), Javelin—Oren Putt (121'9"), 100 yard dash—Ralph Charlton (16.25), 200 yard dash—Owe Helm (28.5), and the 400 yard dash—Dave Helm (1:52.7).

Other records include the 800 yard run—Chuck Davis (4:38.5), Three Mile run—Mike Purdy (16:21), Intermediate Hurdles—Tom Fabian (6:13), High Hurdles—(no record), Triple Jump—Ralph Charlton (38'11"), 440 yard relay—Charlton, Embury, Hughes, Hackley (1:53), and the Mike Reley-Helm, Hackley, Hughes, Embury (4:01).

Philip Taylor led the golf team with a four over par 76 and Mark Bowker and Rick felt paced the red team. On Tuesday, the Madisons met St. Francis for the first time in several years. The gold team's Philip Taylor's 80 shot 25, while the red team led by Mark Bowler's 80 shot 33. St. Francis College finished a distant third with 404. The Madisons have only one dual meet in and one at Friday at Huntington.

The IPFW golf team played its only game of the season and brought home third place honors in the Tri-State Invitational Golf Tournament held at the Glen Oaks.

Since TONY JARBOUR

By TONY JARBOUR

Since suddenly fell upon the mighty Madison bats as IPFW stumbled to three straight losses last week. A doubleheader loss at Glen Oaks followed by a 6-1 thumping by Grace gave the Tankers their first losing streak of any kind this season.

After last Wednesday's single game with Alma College, the Tankers, they traveled to Glen Oaks only to be beaten 7-2 and 2-1. What was the first time the Madisons tumbled double-defeat all season.

The home team jumped on started Oren Lehman for two runs in the first inning. It wasn't until the fourth inning that the Tankers got on the scoreboard making 2-1. With one out, Oren Klein and Owe Stenberger rapped back to base singles.

Gary Trump followed with a walk leading the bases for John Tescia who led a sacrifice fly driving home the only run on the scoreboard.

Glen Oaks, however, broke the game wide open as it tallied five runs in the next two innings. IPFW could only counter with one run in its final inning. Coach Widman led off with a pitch hit single. Ken Rosenberg got on with an error charged to the pitcher, and Jim Rosenberg sent a run in with the pinch hit single. Any hope for a miracle rally faded when a misplayed error in the second game sent down in order.

In the second game, the Madisons sought their opponents 8-6 only to lose 2-1. A fine performance on the mound by

Saturday at Zellerbach Golf Course in Angola. It was expected that the Madisons would finish no better than sixth in the field when included several other Michigan teams including Saginaw Valley State College, the defending Michigan State WAA champions, and one of the top-ranked teams.

After an effort which won Skip Leish finish third individually with a 77 and Jim Rudewer fire a 78 to tie for fourth place individually but to the third place finish in the twelve team field.

Baseball team falls twice to Glen Oaks

Mike Rosene was wasted as his teammates couldn't string the necessary hits together for a big inning.

The weatherman once again failed to cooperate at the Saturday doubleheader scheduled at Franklin fell victim to rain. The two casualties marked seven of the last eleven games that were cancelled due to poor weather.

A wet field Thursday forced the scheduled doubleheader with Grace to be played as a single game at City Utilities Park. The Tankers got used to most of the beautiful afternoon and had but one run to show for it.

After spotting their opponents one run without a hit in the first, the Madisons looked like they might come out of hibernation. Coach Pinkerton started things off with a lead off triple. One out later he came home on Klein's bunt single. When an errant throw from Grace's pitcher ended up in left field, Kim went off to right field and the Tankers tallied to one of anything the rest of the way.

Grace meanwhile piled up 6 runs with the help of a error by the erratic Madison defense. Their big inning was the fifth when they tied the ballgame with 3 runs.

With a 9-6 season record going into yesterday's big doubleheader with Indiana Tech, the Madisons travel to Aguirre for a doubleheader today. They return home tomorrow to host OSU 11 a.m. in a doubleheader that was a weather victim earlier.
